BIALIK College recently held its secondary school production of the Yiddish play The Golem, which was thought-provoking and at times a tragic exploration of dark times in Jewish history.

The actors and crew members did a tremendous job at putting on this mature play which details the persecution of Jewish communities in Eastern Europe.

Director and head of drama Eli Erez commended all those involved in the production, saying, "It has been a privilege and pleasure to see how our students have dealt with this complex subject matter and in turn have developed skills in leadership, teamwork, focus, commitment, respect and resilience.

"To the students who have been involved in every facet of this production – our lighting, sound and multimedia team, our costume and make-up team, our front-of-house team, our talent cast and our stage manager – we are very proud of the incredible work you produced."
