IT is always important to remember where you come from even if you're one of the most important people in the country. And for the Minister for Environment and Energy Josh Frydenberg, it's no different,

Earlier this month, the Member for Kooyong welcomed the year 6 cohort from his former school, Bialik College, to Canberra and Parliament House.

As well as learning about the nation's capital and democracy, the young visitors had the opportunity to watch our country's lawmakers in session at a moment when history was in the making, namely the precise time Donald Trump was announced as the victorious candidate in the US presidential election.

"It was great to meet the students from Bialik, who are not just from my electorate but also from my old school from where I have many fond memories," Frydenberg told The AJN.
