

Singing in one voice

BANDS, choirs and musicians from Melbourne's Jewish schools have been rehearsing for weeks in preparation for the In One Voice festival's highly anticipated street concert next month.

The very best talent of primary and secondary students from Sholem Aleichem College, Bialik College, Mount Scopus Memorial College, the King David School and Leibler Yavneh College will be joining the exciting line-up of performers for the March 15 concert.

Renditions of famous Israeli, Yiddish and Hebrew songs can be expected on the day and the various school choirs, dancers and bands are set to be one of the main attractions, promising to get all revellers up and dancing.

The festival - which celebrates Jewish culture in Australia - promises to unite Melbourne Jewry with musical acts, delicious food and engaging activities on Sunday, March 15.
