

Balloons for Bialik

ZOE KRON

BIALIK College recently celebrated the launch of its new learning environment for the primary school by holding a special assembly and releasing yellow and blue balloons into the sky over its Hawthorn East Campus.

The rebuilt primary school is a state-of-the-art facility with multi-purpose and multi-sensory rooms and a variety of learning and play spaces to provide a diverse way to teach and learn.

It took almost all year to complete the project and the students were excited to start learning in the new space.

To mark the day, the students gathered outside to hear head of primary school Karen Friede speak about the about the significance of affixing mezuzot on the doorpost of every entrance.

College principal Jeremy Stowe-Lindner joined the students for the festivities as the crowd belted out a beautiful rendition of Hebrew song Shehechianu before releasing the balloons in celebration.

Yellow and blue balloons for Bialik College's rebuilt primary school.