Primary Parliament Convention with Bialik

BUDDING politicians and year 5 students at Bialik College Jake Axarlis, Dustin Feldman, Natasha Fried and Michael Fisher represented the school at the Victorian Parliament's primary school convention.

The college, along with 30 other Victorian schools, attended the convention where they presented on whether young people's voices are heard in Victorian politics.

Natasha was also among 20 other students who were invited to address the parliamentarians where she spoke about the ways in which young people can voice their opinions and beliefs.

Throughout the day the students heard from Minister for Education James Merlino and democracy consultant Yvonne Goudie.
